Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurWhen a troubled, homeless veteran covers her vintage Cadillac with paper snowflakes, Lalla Bains, decides a showdown is needed, but that doesn't mean she wants the man to drop dead at her feetwith a pair of blue handled scissors sticking out of his chest.Though the police ignore his last puzzling poem, Lalla sees it as a clue and decides that someone needs to be on the side of this misunderstood man, and that person will be the exasperating, pushy, tenacious, Ms. Lalla Bains, which begs the question: What would you do if the love of your life lost their chance for a heart transplant because the donor organ went to a convicted felon? Grieve and let go? Or wait for your chance at justice and revenge? ~~~"Crime solvers- this is a must read to add insights into hearts and motives. Author Dahlke invites you to journey into her books in this series as well as previous and soon to be releases. I recommend this book with a high 5- star rating." fell into the job of running a crop-dusting business when my dad decided hed rather go on a cruise than take another season of lazy pilots, missing flaggers, testy farmers and horrific hours. After two years at the helm, I handed him back the keys and fled to a city without any of the above. And no, I was never a crop-duster. I write about a tall, blond and beautiful ex-model turned crop-duster who, to quote Lalla Bains, says: Ive been married so many times they oughta revolk my license. I wanted to give readers a peek at the not so-perfect -

life of a beautiful blond. Lalla Bains is no Danielle Steele character, shes not afraid of chipping her manicure. Scratch that, the girl doesnt have time for a manicure what with herding a bunch of recalcitrant pilots and juggling work orders just to keep her fathers flagging business alive. I enjoy writting with humor, and if you enjoy my books, I'd love to hear from you! Here's my e-mail: rp@rpdahlke.com
